The DAV broke ground on its new climbing centre

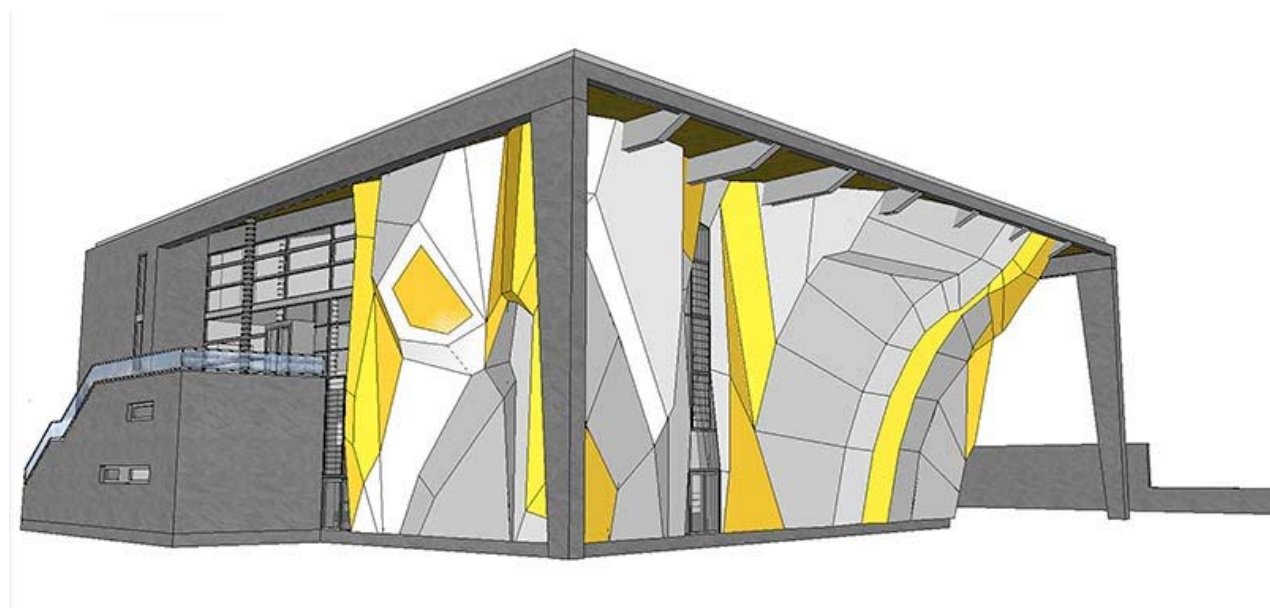

The new DAV-Climbing and Bouldering Centre München-Nord will be finished in 2015. In Munich-Freimann, one of the most modern climbing facilities in the world has been erected. The center, with 3,800 square meters of climbing and bouldering surfaces, is expected to open its doors by April 2015.

250 indoor climbing routes

With 1 900 square meters, the indoor climbing areas will be home to 250 climbing routes. An indoor bouldering facility of 800 square meters will please the many followers of this trend sport. A separate kids' climbing and play area with many age-appropriate attractions will open for the next generation. In the outdoor complex, an indoor rock climbing area is planned with approximately 1,100 square meters of climbing surface and is currently in the first phase of construction.

An outdoor bouldering area, which is connected to the indoor boulder hall, will be completed in the next phase of construction. The outdoor area will also include a competition arena that can host over 2,000 spectators. The bistro area with its large roof terrace invites to relax. Visitors enjoy the beautiful views of the outdoor enclosure.

"A dream comes true"

After almost a decade of planning, "DAV Kletter- und Boulderzentren München e.V." and the participating sportsclub "SC München - Freimann 1950 e.V." called this a "long cherished dream finally coming true. Right next to the climbing and bouldering facility the partner SC München - Freimann 1950 e.V. will offer other sports such as tennis and soccer. A key part of the joint project is the multi-purpose gym, which will be used by both clubs.
